Training camps, military sites targeted, relief food delivered

Initial strikes launched in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7, 2001 - President George W. Bush today announced strikes by the U.S. military against al Qaeda terrorist training camps and military installations of the Taliban regime in Afghanistan.

The President said that "these carefully targeted actions are designed to disrupt the use of Afghanistan as a terrorist base of operations, and to attack the military capability of the Taliban regime." He also went on to say that U.S. allies have also joined in this operation.

He said "We are joined in this operation by our staunch friend, Great Britain. Other close friends, including Canada, Australia, Germany and France, have pledged forces as the operation unfolds. More than 40 countries in the Middle East, Africa, Europe and across Asia have granted air transit or landing rights. Many more have shared intelligence. We are supported by the collective will of the world.

"More than two weeks ago, I gave Taliban leaders a series of clear and specific demands: Close terrorist training camps; hand over leaders of the al Qaeda network; and return all foreign nationals, including American citizens, unjustly detained in your country. None of these demands were met. And now the Taliban will pay a price. By destroying camps and disrupting communications, we will make it more difficult for the terror network to train new recruits and coordinate their evil plans.

"Initially, the terrorists may burrow deeper into caves and other entrenched hiding places. Our military action is also designed to clear the way for sustained, comprehensive and relentless operations to drive them out and bring them to justice.

"At the same time, the oppressed people of Afghanistan will know the generosity of America and our allies. As we strike military targets, we'll also drop food, medicine and supplies to the starving and suffering men and women and children of Afghanistan.

"The United States of America is a friend to the Afghan people, and we are the friends of almost a billion worldwide who practice the Islamic faith. The United States of America is an enemy of those who aid terrorists and of the barbaric criminals who profane a great religion by committing murder in its name.

"This military action is a part of our campaign against terrorism, another front in a war that has already been joined through diplomacy, intelligence,

'Nightdippers' get the save

By Lt. William R. Urban

The "Nightdippers" of Helicopter Anti-Submarine Squadron (HS) 5 saved a Sailor in trouble Sept. 20.

Operating on board the USS John F. Kennedy (CV 67), the "Nightdipper" alert crew, consisting of Lt. Chris Brinkac, Lt. David Walker, AW2 Kerry Campbell, and AW3 David Collins, answered the call. Immediately responding to the "Man Overboard" call over the IMC, the crew rushed to their SH-60F Seahawk helicopter, spun it up, launched in under 15 minutes, and in less than 45 minutes, delivered the survivor to the flight deck and the waiting medical staff.

At 9:53 a.m., with flight operations complete for the night, most of the USS John F. Kennedy (CV 67) and Carrier Air Wing Seven Sailors and officers had just finished watching the President's address to the nation concerning the "War on Terrorism." The exuberant and patriotic reaction to the President's speech was soon interrupted by the call of "Man Overboard, Man Overboard!" over the ship's IMC. Several lookouts Sailors, Marines and DoD civilians prepare to kick off the Navy Birthday Run yesterday on NAS Jacksonville's Mustin Road. A golf tournament celebrating the birthday is today and the Navy Ball is tomorrow evening.

SecNav England sends Navy Birthday Message

WASHINGTON (NNS) — As we celebrate the United States Navy's 226th year of defending this great republic, it is fitting that we take a few moments to reflect upon our proud heritage. Throughout history, our Navy and our Nation have defeated every adversary and every challenger we have faced.

In the earliest days of our republic, USS Constitution and her sister ships defeated the most powerful navies in the world. In World War II, the attack on Pearl Harbor spurred us on to sweep the Imperial Fleet from the Pacific. Today we face a new foe in a new kind of war, but at the end of the day, the result will be the same — victory.

The terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, will echo through history. My charge to you is to never forget. Never forget this attack on the American way of life. Never forget the lives of our shipmates and countrymen lost. Never forget the selfless acts of bravery and generosity that emerged following the attacks. With renewed purpose, we will come to remember September 11th as the day that marked the beginning of the end for these enemies of freedom.

When I took office last May, I outlined four strategic priorities for our Navy. Today, these priorities - combat capability, people, technology and improved business practices — demand an even greater sense of urgency as we wage the first war of the 21st century. Over the years, our Navy has adapted to changes in technology, tactics and command structures to counter new threats to our way of life. This is the strength of our Navy.

I know that in ships, submarines and squadrons around the world, you stand ready to answer our nation's call. During the course of this challenging year, our Nation will continue to count on your honor, courage and commitment. As our Navy sails into its 226th year, I encourage each of you to take a few moments to reflect on the blessings we enjoy that were earned by earlier generations. Your children, grandchildren and future generations will likewise honor your defense of freedom.

Happy Birthday Shipmates! God Bless each of you, your families and the United States of America.

*The Honorable Gordon R. England,
Secretary of the Navy*

Combined Federal Campaign underway at NAS Jacksonville

Last year, the warm-hearted generous men and women at NAS Jacksonville donated $564,711.00 to the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC), making the 2000 campaign one of the most successful of its history.

This year we hope to do even better, with our goal being $635,000. The money will support the many voluntary health and human care agencies that do so much to cure and prevent disease, render emergency/crisis assistance, provide family assistance and counseling, aid the poor, save lives, provide food and shelter in critical areas, and help people in need in a variety of other ways.

We all need to ensure that everyone on board NAS Jacksonville is given the opportunity to fill out a pledge card and donate to any of the numerous deserving organizations listed in this year's brochure.

Payroll deduction is an easy, convenient way to make a significant donation by having only a few dollars deducted each pay period. If just half of the individuals who did not donate to CFC last year contribute $1 per pay period, an additional $113,000 would be raised. In addition, if every person who donated to CFC last year increased their donation by just $1 a pay period, an additional $125,800 would be raised. Combined that would well exceed our goal this year!

Your CFC Loaned Executives are: Ginger Batey, MS1 (SW) Perry, SH1 (SW) Williams, YNC Brock, and Lt. Fred Berg as the vice-chair. The CFC office is located in Bldg. 1, Room 221, call 542-2583. These Loaned Executives are available to offer any assistance you may need. This year's theme is "We're all in this together."

Domestic Abuse Prevention Month observed in October

From the Fleet and Family Support Center

The month of October is recognized nationally and throughout the Department of Defense as Domestic Violence Prevention Month. It is a time for awareness, education and prevention on the serious health and social problem of domestic violence.

The primary mission of the Family Advocacy Program is prevention of family violence and providing effective intervention when it does occur.

The term domestic violence once referred to issues involving spouse/intimate partner abuse and until the last decade was not viewed as a serious problem. The criminal justice system and community service agencies believed the abuse was a non-serious family matter, keeping the problem behind closed doors. These trends have changed and increasingly, domestic violence is regarded as a serious crime. The term now also takes on a more comprehensive meaning and often includes child abuse and other forms of family violence.

Concern for the welfare of Navy families and the effects of family violence on military readiness and performance prompted the establishment of the FAP in 1976. The FAP is designed to address prevention, identification, reporting, intervention and treatment of child abuse/neglect and spouse abuse. The earlier family violence is recognized and reported, the earlier a family may receive help. Reporting a case of family violence may be the first step in helping that family receive intervention and preventing more serious harm or injury to family members, thus helping to dissolve room for domestic violence.

Preventing domestic violence truly is everyone's responsibility - every one is responsible not only for their safety and the safety and well being of family members but also for shipmates, neighbors, co-workers, friends and all others on this base.

If you are a victim of domestic violence or know someone who is, report it immediately to the Family Advocacy Representative (FAR) at the Fleet and Family Support Center, Building 876, (Corner of Al-legheny and Humboldt Streets) (904) 542-2766, ext. 152, 154, 127. Our hours are from 0700 to 1630 Mondays through Fridays. Report to Security at all other times.

Training on Domestic Violence/Family Advocacy is available and mandated for military personnel by OPNAVINST 1752.2A.

For more information, call Linda Moore at 542-2766, ext. 154.

The Florida Georgia Blood Alliance needs blood donors and volunteers.

More than 65,000 units of blood need to be donated each year, just to meet the needs of patients in the Northeast Florida and Southeast Georgia region. That means an average of 270 units of blood must be donated from volunteer donors each and every day.

The Florida-Georgia Bloodmobile was here last week taking blood donations at Building 1.

Relocation efforts underway

Flying club operations suspended

By Jeff Hilton
Staff Writer

Flight operations were suspended at the Jax Navy Flying Club (JNFC) Sept. 30.

The action, directed by Naval Air Station Jacksonville Commanding Officer Capt. Mark Boensel, was driven by station security concerns following the most brutal terrorist attacks on American soil. Boensel said, "The club's suspension is just one of several security-related actions taken aboard NAS Jax since the terrorist attacks. Shuttle parking for Jaguars' games, guest access to the Commissary and Navy Exchange as well as on base weddings have also been suspended for security purposes."

Club president Randy Miner said, "The club is strong and viable ... the events of 11 September have overshadowed everything."

Miner and other club members are preparing options for the club to operate under Navy oversight at Cecil Field or Herlong Airport. JNFC intends to submit a plan Boensel can support by the end of October. Miner said, "We plan to satisfy his (Capt. Boensel) concerns. I'm confident we can do that."

The club has been the primary source of training to hundreds of student pilots over the past forty years. Able to offer its members lower rates than its commercial competitors, JNFC opened general aviation to those previously unable to afford it.

Members eligible for Veterans Administration (VA) tuition at the club routinely spend one third less than commercial aviation schools charge.

JNFC holds the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) '141' certification, meaning its students can earn instrument, flight instructor and airline transport pilot ratings. Miner estimates the club has provided advanced training to more than 25 former students who are now working as airline or air transport pilots including several former commanding officers of NAS Jax activities.

Established in the late 1950s, the club first operated from Herlong Field on Jacksonville's Westside before moving aboard NAS Jax in 1980.

Once aboard NAS, the club had a nomadic existence for more than six years. Requirements to support the many NAS Jax-based squadrons led to JNFC moving several times among hangars on the flight line and seawall. According to Miner, ground classes were often held at a number of sites. "There was a bit of a joke that members should call before leaving home to find where the club was that week."

In 1986 the club was allowed to build at its current location across the flight line.

Miner said while the club met and trained in a new building aircraft maintenance was done on the ramp in any kind of weather until a hangar was completed in 1987.

A doublewide trailer was acquired in 1992 that has served as the club's classroom while allowing the clubhouse to serve as office and operations spaces.

Chief Flight Instructor John Nayfack said JNFC has averaged 6,000 flying hours annually for the past five years.

Only three JNFC aircraft are now parked at the club's ramp.

Six other planes have been returned to owners who had leased them to the club. A Navy T-41 Skyhawk operated by the club has been transferred to the Navy Flying Club at NAS Brunswick, Me. Miner said these actions have reduced the club's insurance premiums and operating costs.

The club recently concluded a ground school with a number of members eager to start flying with an instructor.

Roger Wright started ground school in May. "Aviation has been in my life for a long time," said Wright. A recent ground school graduate, he is eager to get airborne. "I'll be taking time to bone up for my written exam," he said of his plans to work around the suspension.

"I was one flight away from my private pilot's license," said Paul Salter, a NADEP employee. He plans to complete his last flight at another facility.

Former JNFC president Ron Brown visits the clubhouse several times a week. "It's something to do," he said.

Until the prospect of the club opening at a new site becomes reality Brown, 70, will find other places to go. The former CSX employee said, "I'm retired and flexible."

Nayfack, who is often at the club seven days a week, said the clubhouse has been swamped with calls concerning suspended operations. He said the club's answering machine message has been revised several times to keep a roster of nearly 200 members up to date.

Miner is also posting progress notes by email. Those interested in receiving announcements may request them at: rminer@bellsouth.net.

'Stop-Loss' policy in effect

WASHINGTON (NNS) — The Navy has implemented its "stop-loss" policy, effective Oct. 10, to retain members of the active force and Reservists on active duty, who are essential to national security, and might otherwise retire or leave the Navy.

Authority to implement stop-loss was delegated to the Secretary of the Navy by the Secretary of Defense, and permits the Navy to involuntarily extend Sailors currently serving on active duty in selected specialty areas.

The Navy's stop-loss policy affects Sailors in the following specialty areas:

- All O-3 and O-4 special operations officers;
- Security limited duty officers;
- Security technician chief warrant officers;
- Cryptologic officers;
- Master-at-arms;
- Enlisted SEALs;
- Special Warfare combatant-craft crewmen with certain Navy enlisted classifications (NEC);

- Explosive Ordnance Disposal technicians;

- Physicians in certain subspecialty codes;

- Nurses in certain subspecialty codes;

- Linguists with certain language codes or NECs.

Though these 11 specialty areas represent approximately 10,500 Sailors, stop-loss policy impacts only those Sailors with a separation or retirement date on or after Oct. 10.

The specialty areas selected represent the most critical skills needed during the Navy's mobilization effort to support the nation's war on terrorism.

"We need to ensure our fleet units are fully manned and ready for national tasking," said Vice Adm. Norb Ryan Jr., Chief of Naval Personnel. "Utilizing stop-loss gives us the ability to directly support the CNO's top priority of mission readiness by ensuring we have the right mix of people to successfully respond to any tasking."

Resolution stabilizes pay for state employees called to active duty

By JO2(SW) Shae Blasko
Staff writer

An Oct. 2 letter from Florida State Comptroller Robert F. Milligan to military commands throughout the state described a resolution recently adopted by Governor Jeb Bush and the Cabinet. The resolution implements the provisions of Florida's Military Service Compensation Law for all State employees called into active duty as a result of the September 11 terrorist attacks.

Under this Florida state law, employees called to active duty will continue to receive their full State pay.

In addition to their military pay, for their first 30 days of active military duty, they will also receive the additional state pay necessary to raise their military pay to the level of their state employee pay.

They will also still continue to receive their existing State benefits.

Along with the Military Service Compensation Law, all mortgage and other debt holders are reminded of the statutory requirements contained in the federal Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and Florida's Soldiers' and Airmen Relief Act (ss. 250.5201 - .5205, F. S.).

These laws provide financial protections for active duty military personnel under certain circumstances, including the right to reduced interest rates on mortgage and credit card debt.

For more information on the Military Service Compensation Law, check the State Comptroller's website at www.dbf.state.fl.us, or at the Central Florida Regional Office website at www.cfro.org.

NAMTraU mourns loss, lauds Sailors

The thoughts and prayers of Naval Air Maintenance Training Unit (NAMTraU) personnel are with those whose lives have been impacted by the terrorist attacks. Navy Captain Jack D. The one constant that remains amid all changes in the past, present and future is; quality training now, results in quality performance in battle later.

After a brief interruption of our normal routine, NAMTraU resumed its training schedule and recognized six personnel who have distinguished themselves as top performers. Hey, MoneyMan!

Why is it that they can never get my pay right? It seems I never know how much money I am supposed to be paid and it always changes. I heard that the PSD was going to change their system again. I just can't wait.

MoneyMan Sez:

Yep, you are right. The Navy recruiters bring in a few people every year, send them to "Paypeople A

School, and train them to goof up everyone's pay so they can make sure morale never gets too high. Actually, a lot of people do have pay problems and part of it is the "system" but another part is service members not understanding pay and entitlements. There are a few things you can do to decrease the chance of you ever having a pay problem. First of all, know your Pass Liaison Representative (PLR). That is the first "go-to" person if your pay is not right. Secondly, learn to read and understand your LES. That way you will know how much you are supposed to be paid each payday. Finally, check out the Personnel Support Activity website at www.psa-jax.navy.mil. This is a great source for all kinds of pay information. You can learn about the new Thrift Savings Plan, pay rates, understanding your LES, and lots of other good stuff. There also is a commanding officer's suggestion box that allows you to get specific questions answered.

You are entitled to be paid the correct amount of money on time, every time. If that is not happening let someone know before a big problem gets even bigger.

HS-5 mourns Sailor's passing

By Lt. William Urban
HS-5 PAO

In the early morning hours of Sept. 2, the "Nightdippers" of Helicopter Anti-Submarine Squadron (HS) 5 lost a dedicated Sailor and Shipmate when AM3 Jason Luke O'Connor was killed in a tragic car accident. In the blink of an eye, the "Nightdipper" family lost a bright young star and was left to mourn.

Jason O'Connor was born on Oct. 4, 1976 in Carroll, Iowa to Luke and Jeanine O'Connor who currently live in Prescott, Ariz. with their daughter Amber and a second son, Travis. He enlisted in the United States Navy on Feb. 19, 1998 in Omaha, Neb. After successful completion of Basic Training in Great Lakes, Ill., he reported to NAS Pensacola for Aviation Structural Mechanic A-School. In July 1998, O'Connor reported to his first permanent duty station, HS-5.

At HS-5, he was assigned temporary duty to the 1st Lieutenant Division where his duties helped contribute to the daily morale and mission of the squadron. After that assignment, O'Connor was sent to the Line Division where he again proved to be a hard working and conscientious member of the squadron. He quickly accumulated numerous qualifications and proved himself a superstar by completing the brake rider, hydraulic contamination and nickel-cadmium battery service qualifications in minimal time. His hard work and dedication paid off when he was designated an H-60 Plane Captain and Landing Signalman Enlisted while deployed onboard USS Dwight D. Eisenhower. In December 2000, O'Connor was advanced to Aviation Structural Mechanic Third Class.

O'Connor was then assigned to the Airframes work center where he quickly became a standout maintainer by performing Structural Systems and Hydraulic Systems maintenance on the H-60 airframe. He was a landing gear system troubleshooter and was toward his tire and wheel certification.

O'Connor's performance was consistently outstanding on a daily basis. His awards include a Commanding Officer's Letter of Appreciation, the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, the Kosovo Campaign Medal, the Sea Service Ribbon and the Good Conduct Medal.

A memorial service, led by Chaplain Lt. Cmdr. Ruben Ortiz and Cmdr. S.R. Schreiber, Jason's commanding officer, was held Sept. 8 in his honor at the All Saint's Chapel on NAS Jacksonville. Several of his closest friends participated in the service conducting Scripture readings, delivering command tributes and sharing fond memories of Jason and how he touched their lives. His closest friends nicknamed him "Bushy" and said they would forever remember the smiles and laughter he brought into their lives. The "Nightdippers" will always remember Jason. To Jason O'Connor, a good friend, and Shipmate, "Fair Winds and Following Seas," from your "Nightdipper" family.

had seen a splash in the water and a strobe. Two of the lookouts immediately threw water-activated smokes overboard and a life ring to mark the location of the survivor.

While the entire ship rushed to muster its personnel, the "Nightdippers" manned their aircraft. Brinkac, the Helicopter Aircraft Commander, and Walker, the co-pilot, dashed to the aircraft with their gear and began their start procedures. Campbell, the crew chief, inspected and tested the rescue hoist and the helicopter SAR equipment one last time before takeoff. Collins, the rescue swimmer, quickly donned his wet suit and prepared himself for entering the dark ocean water. The "Nightdipper" Maintenance team immediately responded with plane captains and trouble-shooters to cover the launch and by 10:07 p.m., 14 minutes after the announcement, the helicopter was turning and cleared for take-off.

At 10:08 p.m., Brinkac lifted off the flight deck and flew the helicopter to the area illuminated by the smokes. After a quick search, the helicopter flew over the strobe light in the water and commenced a Wind Line Rescue Pattern followed by an approach to a 70-foot hover over a strobe light. Campbell immediately lowered Collins into the water on the SH-60F's rescue hoist. Unfortunately, the excitement turned to concern when the strobe they located was in fact attached to a survival float coat with no survivor in it. Apparently, the float coat was separated from the survivor during the fall. By this time, the JFK's motor whaleboat, with a rescue crew of their own, was in hot pursuit of a second strobe and had put their rescue swimmer in the water. Despite some confusion caused by the two rescue swimmers in close proximity, Collins was able to confirm that there was no survivor in the vicinity of the float coat. At this time, looking through Night Vision Goggles (NVGs), Walker spotted the survivor waving her hands in the water 200 yards off the left side of the helicopter. The survivor had no signaling equipment or floatation device and was seen only by Walker using his NVGs.

After Campbell hoisted Collins back into the helicopter, Brinkac quickly repositioned the helicopter into position directly over the survivor. Collins was again lowered on the rescue hoist into the night ocean to a position just a few feet away from the survivor. Collins quickly swam to the survivor and secured her to the rescue hoist. Campbell then hoisted them both out of the water and into the safety of the awaiting helicopter.

Once the survivor was safely inside the aircraft, the helicopter immediately returned to the flight deck of the carrier. The Kennedy's medical staff was waiting on deck and immediately escorted the survivor and Collins to sickbay. A weary Collins was quickly released after a standard post-rescue examination. The survivor was treated for jellyfish stings and minor bruises, then held overnight for further observation. She has since made a complete recovery.

The rescue crew received a gracious thank you and well done from the Commander of Carrier Group Six, the Carrier Air Wing Commander, and the Commanding Officer of the USS John F. Kennedy (CV 67).

They also were awarded Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medals for their outstanding professionalism in the rescue of a shipmate from the dark waters off of Puerto Rico. The entire "Nightdipper" team is proud of their quick reaction and exemplary performance in the rescue of a Sailor in distress.

'Ground Zero' Flag flies over USS Theodore Roosevelt

ON BOARD USS THEODORE ROOSEVELT -- A solemn, emotion-packed ceremony marked the transfer of New York City's now-famous "Ground Zero" American flag - from fire and rescue personnel to the crew of USS Theodore Roosevelt on Sept. 30.

The flag was autographed on its canvas border by New York City Mayor Rudolf Giuliani and New York Governor George Pataki. Commander, Atlantic Fleet Adm. Robert Natter received the flag from the mayor and sent it on its way to TR.

A sparkling clear sky and a calm, blue sea punctuated the day of its arrival; a majestic and reverent stage for the passing of the flag on the flight deck of the nuclear powered aircraft carrier.

Nearly all of the ship's 5,500 crew members witnessed as the flag that once was hoisted over the rubble at Ground Zero was presented to Commanding Officer Capt. Richard O'Hanlon, a native New Yorker.

"As a New Yorker, as an American and as the commanding officer of this ship, I am honored to give the order to fly this flag for the people of New York City above the ship named in honor of one of the greatest New Yorkers of the 19th and 20th centuries," he said. O'Hanlon then handed the flag to TR's fire team.

Dressed in their fire engine red coveralls and helmets, the fire fighters lined up to pass the flag Hand over Hand, a long-standing Naval tradition reserved for honoring the dead.

"Just touching the flag was enough for me. This flag represents pretty much everything that went on that day - the people who died, the fire fighters who died, the policemen who died, and (it represents) all of what America feels," said Damage Control Fireman Brian Smith of Simi Valley, Calif., a former civilian firefighter. "It was a way for the New York fire fighters to say 'we are in full support of you - we want you to go out there and do something about (the attacks of Sept. 11).'"

As the flag moved from firefighter to firefighter, emotions were high, memories of Sept. 11 fresh on the minds.

"(When I saluted) I was thinking of all the firefighters who died and all of the people killed and how proud I am to be serving our country at this time," said Petty Officer 3rd Class Jerry Jenko of Pittsburgh, also a former civilian firefighter. "My salute was for the United States and the flag and for all of our fallen comrades."

Then, the flag was carried to the ship's Signal Bridge where it was raised on the yardarm for the entire crew to see.

"It was an honor to raise it for the TR crew," said Petty Officer 3rd Class Shawn Reece of Charlotte, N.C. "If something takes place, we will raise it for all of the people of New York City. When we left (Norfolk), we took New York's pain, sorrow and 'why?' with us. When we return, we will bring them back a little bit of their pride."

A rousing cheer arose from the crew that packed onto the Flight Deck to witness the historic event.

The ceremony, though brief, seemed to unify the spirit of the crew.

"I have really seen that people are pulling for us and are pulling together back at home for us," said Petty Officer Third Class Timothy Noel. "I felt honored that (the people of NYC) thought of us at a time like this." Noel said the event convinced him to "Stay Navy."

"We are very proud to have the flag flying," said Petty Officer 1st Class Rodney Hightower of Farmerville, Texas. "We all consider this our battle flag now. We going to fly it and fly proudly."

Roosevelt Battle Group Commander Rear Adm. Mark P. Fitzgerald echoed these sentiments.

"This is a proud moment for TR and a proud moment for all of America... This flag, a symbol of our nation for more than 200 years and a symbol of American resolve in the wake of the Sept. 11 attack, will fly from the mast of this great ship as she protects American interests throughout the world."

Navy personnel, supporters run with American Flag

WASHINGTON (NNS) — The terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 touched everyone in America, one way or another. Ensign Daniel Campos, stationed in Annapolis, Md., watched as thousands of Americans were killed on live television, and took note of the subsequent sacrifices by firefighters and rescue workers.

He decided on a unique way to pay tribute. A World Trade Center relay, where runners would carry the American flag from the Pentagon all the way to the site of the World Trade Center, would be an appropriate way to rally the American spirit to honor to the victims. Runners would pass the American flag to each other all along the route, all 250-plus miles.

According to the Campos, the purpose behind the run was threefold:

- To show those who are still working there that America is proud and supportive of them;
- To show America's unity, strength and resolve in a time of turmoil;
- To heighten awareness of the need to support the families of those who have passed and those who remain to finish the business of reconstructing the Pentagon and excavating the wreckage of the World Trade Center.

Campos figured that it would take two days at a runner's pace to cover the distance from the Pentagon to the WTC site if they ran all day and night.

He asked fellow ensigns, Christine Fix and Jon Durham for help. They were able to rally enough volunteers, more than 60, to break the journey into 40-mile blocks, with about seven or so runners in each "wave." A chase van would carry the non-runners until a relief van could catch up with a fresh group.

The primary flag was obtained from the office of the Secretary of the Navy in the Pentagon. It was a rather large version, with gold trim and a wooden pole. A second, lighter flag with an aluminum pole was also used for the long distance travel.

Fix planned the route so the runners wouldn't take any major thoroughfares. However, the course of the run would take the runners through two major cities before New York: Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The group took off at 6 a.m. Friday,

Sept. 28, about an hour before sunrise.

By Saturday morning, the runners made it up to Philadelphia. A policeman pulled alongside in his cruiser and asked what they were doing. Once the police discovered where the runners were headed, an escort was immediately arranged and the runners were put on a more direct route.

The runners got lots of attention in the City of Brotherly love and beyond.

"Wherever we went, policemen, firemen would all stop and salute us," said Fix. "People along the route were coming out of their shops to check us out. Riders on their motorcycles were saluting us."

The group of runners ended up with police escorts from Philadelphia all the way through New Jersey to their final destination.

"When we passed from one jurisdiction to another, the police would radio ahead and turn us over to the next escort," explained Fix. "We had a police escort pretty much all the way into New York City."

"I'll never forget the show of support from everybody," wrote Jan Waters, an Annapolis resident who ran along with her military neighbors. "People giving words of encouragement, hollering

America strikes back against terror

Afghanistan: Ageless battleground

WASHINGTON (NNS) — It is a country that has humbled three empires, yet Afghanistan has few natural resources and is wreathed in poverty.

Afghanistan is sheltering Osama bin Laden, the man at the center of the attacks on the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon. President Bush wants him "dead or alive."

Bush also has said the United States "will make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these acts and those who harbor them." A full range of diplomatic and economic efforts is under way to convince the Islamic Taliban movement to turn over bin Laden.

Afghanistan is a rugged country regarded as the crossroads between Central and South Asia. As such, it lies on the route that invaders and explorers have taken from Alexander the Great to Marco Polo to the British to the Soviet Union.

There is no functioning government in Afghanistan. The executive branch broke down in 1996. The legislative branch stopped functioning in 1993. The judicial branch stopped in 1995.

The Taliban get most of their support from the Pashtun ethnic group. They control the capital of Kabul and about 80 percent of the country, while other factions rule the multiethnic north. The United States does not recognize the Taliban as Afghanistan's government.

The Taliban said their aim was to set up the world's purest Islamic state. They initially gained favor by efforts to stamp out local warring factions and to stamp out corruption.

The Taliban has imposed Shari'a — Islamic law — in the areas it controls. The imposition means offenses are punished by public executions and amputations. The Taliban have made it illegal to educate women or for women to work outside the home. It is illegal to watch any television program not cleared by the Taliban or to own any videocassettes that are not religion-oriented. The Taliban has also outlawed the Internet.

Afghanistan has 25 million people, but many are refugees. Pakistani officials said about 2.5 million Afghans are living in Pakistan. More are trying to reach Pakistan as tensions between the United States and Afghanistan ratchet up over bin Laden. Other counties with significant Afghan refugee populations are Iran and Turkmenistan.

Afghanistan is a landlocked country bordered by Pakistan, Iran, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan, Tajikistan and China. In the north of the country is the Hindu Kush, a mountain range that is part of the Himalayas.

The main "industry" is herding. Some 46 percent of the land is in permanent pastures. Only 12 percent of the land was considered arable a few years ago, and that percentage is suspect today because of a long-term drought.

Afghanistan has no industry worth the name. It has less than 25 kilometers of railroads. The most recent statistics available put the per capita income at $800 per year, but people who have been in the country say that's an exaggeration — the estimate's too high.

The country is 99 percent Muslim and 1 percent "other." The Taliban have outlawed all other religions in the area they control. In fact, the Taliban are prosecuting some American aid workers for allegedly distributing bibles and "trying to tempt people from the 'True Faith.'" Some 84 percent of Afghans are Sunni Muslim and 15 percent are Shi'a Muslim, mostly along the border with Iran.

Afghan history has been bloody. Alexander the Great moved through the area and allegedly fought a battle near what is now Kandahar. Genghis Khan's invasion and subjugation of the area in the early 1200s marked the last time Afghanistan was conquered.

Czarist Russia and Britain vied for control of Afghanistan throughout the 19th century because its strategic location made it a key to the control of India. Both suffered defeats.

The British occupied Kabul in 1838, but worsening resistance led them to quit in January 1842. Given a pledge of safe passage, the British commander led about 700 Britons — soldiers, wives and children — 3,800 Indian troops, and more than 12,000 camp followers from the city. The trek through a snow-covered mountain pass to safety would become a 90-mile death march. Only one man emerged alive.

In the 20th century, Afghanistan humbled the Soviet Union. Seeking to prop up their communist satellite in the country, the Soviets invaded in 1979. In a 10-year effort, hundreds of thousands died. The United States, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan and others supplied and trained the anti-Soviet mujahidin forces. In 1989, the Soviets were forced to leave.

But fighting didn't end. Various mujahidin factions fought among themselves for control of the country. The Taliban rode to power on this fighting. Civil war continues in the country, but to a lesser extent than in the past. In addition to the continuing civil strife, the country suffers from enormous poverty, a crumbling infrastructure, and widespread live land mines.

aid terrorists and of the barbaric criminals who profane a great religion by committing murder in its name.

"This military action is a part of our campaign against terrorism, another front in a war that has already been joined through diplomacy, intelligence, the freezing of financial assets and the arrests of known terrorists by law enforcement agents in 38 countries. Given the nature and reach of our enemies, we will win this conflict by the patient accumulation of successes, by meeting a series of challenges with determination and will and purpose.

"Today we focus on Afghanistan, but the battle is broader. Every nation has a choice to make. In this conflict, there is no neutral ground. If any government sponsors the outlaws and killers of innocents, they have become outlaws and murderers, themselves. And they will take that lonely path at their own peril.

"I'm speaking to you today from the Treaty Room of the White House, a place where American Presidents have worked for peace. We're a peaceful nation. Yet, as we have learned, so suddenly and so tragically, there can be no peace in a world of sudden terror. In the face of today's new threat, the only way to pursue peace is to pursue those who threaten it.

"We did not ask for this mission, but we will fulfill it. The name of today's military operation is Enduring Freedom. We defend not only our precious freedoms, but also the freedom of people everywhere to live and raise their children free from fear.

"I know many Americans feel fear today. And our government is taking strong precautions. All law enforcement and intelligence agencies are working aggressively around America, around the world and around the clock. At my request, many governors have activated the National Guard to strengthen airport security. We have called up Reserves to reinforce our military capability and strengthen the protection of our homeland.

"In the months ahead, our patience will be one of our strengths - patience with the long waits that will result from tighter security; patience and understanding that it will take time to achieve our goals; patience in all the sacrifices that may come.

"Today, those sacrifices are being made by members of our Armed Forces who now defend us so far from home, and by their proud and worried families. A Commander-in-Chief sends America's sons and daughters into a battle in a foreign land only after the greatest care and a lot of prayer. We ask a lot of those who wear our uniform. We ask them to leave their loved ones, to travel great distances, to risk injury, even to be prepared to make the ultimate sacrifice of their lives. They are dedicated, they are honorable; they represent the best of our country. And we are grateful.

"To all the men and women in our military - every Sailor, every Soldier, every Airman, every Coast Guardsman, every Marine - I say this: Your mission is defined; your objectives are clear; your goal is just. You have my full confidence, and you will have every tool you need to carry out your duty.

"I recently received a touching letter that says a lot about the state of America in these difficult times - a letter from a 4th-grade girl, with a father in the military: "As much as I don't want my Dad to fight," she wrote, "I'm willing to give him to you."

"This is a precious gift, the greatest she could give. This young girl knows what America is all about. Since September 11, an entire generation of young Americans has gained new understanding of the value of freedom, and its cost in duty and in sacrifice.

"The battle is now joined on many fronts. We will not waver; we will not tire; we will not falter; and we will not fail. Peace and freedom will prevail.

"Thank you. May God continue to bless America."

Bin Laden: At war with America

WASHINGTON (NNS) — The president and other senior U.S. government officials believe Osama bin Laden and his associates masterminded the Sept. 11 attacks against America. They are suspected of being responsible for many more.

Bin Laden's current protectors, the ruling Islamic fundamentalist Taliban movement in Afghanistan, continue to refuse to extradite him to answer for numerous crimes he is accused of committing. Bin Laden and his organization are suspected of playing a role in the following assaults and incidents against Americans in the past decade:

- In May, four men connected to bin Laden's network were convicted by a U.S. jury of plotting the Aug. 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. That attack killed 224 people.

- The New York World Trade Center was attacked before. On Feb. 26, 1993, a bomb went off in the center, killing six people and injuring 1,000.

- Five U.S. service members were killed Nov. 13, 1995, in Saudi Arabia by a car bombing.

- Nineteen service members were killed and 400 were wounded June 25, 1996, when a car bomb exploded just outside the Khobar Towers apartment complex in Saudi Arabia.

- A terrorist was captured trying to enter the United States from the Canadian border in the Pacific Northwest in late 1999 just before the millennium celebration. The alleged target: Los Angeles International Airport.

- On Oct. 12, 2000, a small boat containing a suicide bomber pulled up alongside the destroyer USS Cole (DDG 67) anchored in the port of Aden, Yemen. The bomb blew a hole in Cole, killing 17 Sailors and wounding 39.

Bin Laden denies involvement with the attacks, including the Sept. 11 hijackings and assaults in New York and Washington, D.C.

Wolfowitz: Terrorism fight means more than military action

BRUSSELS, Belgium (NNS) — Don't expect the United States and its allies to simply drop a heavy military hammer on terrorists worldwide and leave it at that.

"I think it can't be stressed enough that everybody who is waiting for a military action because they think that is the definition of a campaign" doesn't understand the war on global terrorism is a multifaceted endeavor, Deputy Defense Secretary Paul D. Wolfowitz said to reporters Sept. 26 at NATO headquarters.

Wolfowitz, attending defense ministerial meetings in Brussels, Belgium, noted that actions have been taken against the terrorists already. For example, he noted, President Bush on Sept. 24 froze the financial assets of some 27 suspected terrorist organizations and individuals.

He said DoD is engaged in efforts to find the terrorists responsible for the Sept. 11 attacks on the New York World Trade Center and the Pentagon and bringing them to justice.

However, he added, the ultimate goal is to shut down terrorism worldwide.

Military action may indeed be taken against global terrorists, Wolfowitz said. He also said it is important for the United States and its allies to first gather more information on where the terrorists are and how they operate.

Generating information about crucial targets is part of fighting terrorism, Wolfowitz said, adding that accurate information means more effective results. "We're trying to find every snake in the swamp." But it is also necessary to drain that swamp, he added.

To be effective against global terrorists, Wolfowitz said the United States and its coalition partners must be flexible and adaptive. This means bringing diplomatic, economic, humanitarian and political pressures to bear in addition to military methods, he said.

Members of anti-terrorist coalitions may mix or match specific contributions to achieve goals, such as one member providing diplomatic expertise in a particular region of the world, Wolfowitz said.

"Some countries will be very active with us, we think, going after problems that affect them more directly, and (also) helping us with problems that are more remote," Wolfowitz said.

Other countries would be willing to help anti-terrorist nations secretly, Wolfowitz said. "We'll take that help."

Must see Afghans' lives are better than with Taliban, Rumsfeld says

WASHINGTON (NNS) — Many Afghans are being starved and are fleeing the Taliban, and the United States must do all it can to help them, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said during a Sept. 25 press conference.

"We have to do everything possible we can from a humanitarian standpoint to see that their lives are made better than they currently are by the Taliban government and by the circumstance they're living in," the defense secretary said. "They don't support the Taliban. They don't support the Al Qaeda network."

Rumsfeld echoed the sentiments of President Bush, who said America's issues and anger are directed at Afghanistan's Taliban rulers, not toward the citizenry. Bush called the Taliban "an incredibly repressive" regime that made a decision to harbor terrorists.

Bush said one way to get rid of Al Qaeda is "to ask for the cooperation of citizens within Afghanistan who may be tired of having the Taliban in place, or tired of having Osama bin Laden, people from foreign soils, in their own land, willing to finance this repressive government."

Rumsfeld's comments at the Pentagon came while he described the situation in Afghanistan for reporters. In the north of the country is an anti-Taliban alliance, he said. Then there's the Taliban, and in the south are a number of tribes not affiliated with Taliban.

"It is not a perfectly clear picture where everyone fits into a nice box," Rumsfeld said. Even factions within the Taliban don't agree with the rulers' support of the Al Qaeda terror network of Osama bin Laden.

He likened America's and its allies' options in Afghanistan to playing billiards. Sometimes you watch the balls careen around and don't know exactly what'll happen. "But the end result, we would hope, would be a situation where the Al Qaeda is heaved out," Rumsfeld said. "And the people in Taliban who think that it's good for them and good for the world to harbor terrorists and to foment and encourage and facilitate that kind of activity, lose — and lose seriously."

"The mission is to rout terrorists, to find them and bring them to justice," the president said. "Or, in Western terms, to smoke them out of their caves, to get them running so we can get them. ... We're angry, but we've got a clear vision."

"The show of support was unreal," wrote Hospital Corpsman 1st Class Rich Moesch. "The horns blowing, the sirens, people cheering, the thanks from all of the people in New York was just unreal."

After passing through the Holland Tunnel and into Manhattan around 6 p.m. Saturday, the runners and police escorts stopped at the berth of USNS Comfort (T-AH 20), where they presented the lighter flag to the commanding officer of the ship. An hour later, they were off again, this time with some extra runners from Comfort. Nothing, not even Hollywood, could prepare the runners for what they found when they finally arrived at the site of the former World Trade Center.

"We all were just shocked," said Fix when the runners got to the WTC site. "It's like nothing you've seen on TV. It was so much more devastating then we had seen. It was kind of surreal."

Fix continued, "The firemen were quite honored to see us.

They took us past the barricades and right to their firehouse by the Trade Center. They showed us the remainder of a fire truck, which was little more than a door. We all stopped and had a moment of silence for the people that were lost."

"I thought it was the greatest thing in the world," said John Bambury, New York Fire department's deputy fire chief, who was at "ground zero" when the runners presented him with the flag from the Pentagon. "Our spirits were really low. We lost so many men. This helped boost our morale."

The runners also got a morale boost by helping to stir a wave of patriotism during one of the darkest times in American history.

TRICARE Prime Remote is there

Here in the Jacksonville area we're fortunate to have a Naval Hospital, and three branch medical clinics to meet the health care needs of our active duty personnel and their families. Active duty families also have access to a large TRICARE Prime network of civilian doctors and hospitals. That is not the case for all active duty people and you just might get orders to an area that is far removed from the nearest military installation, such as recruiting duty. Where would you get your health care? TRICARE Prime Remote is the answer to that question.

TRICARE Prime remote offers benefits very similar to TRICARE Prime for active-duty people who are stationed more than 50 miles or a one-hour drive from a military hospital or clinic. In 2002, the TRICARE Prime remote benefit will be offered to family members.

To participate, family members must enroll in the TRICARE Prime remote for active-duty family member program.

The benefits include lower out-of-pocket costs for most health care, enhanced access to preventive services and the ability to select a primary care manager when one is available in the area. To get more information about the program, military members and their families should visit the TRICARE Management Activity Web site at www.TRICARE.osd.mil and to click on "TRICARE beneficiaries, understanding your TRICARE benefits."

For specific questions or to inquire about eligibility status, people can speak with a TRICARE Management Activity representative by calling (800) DOD-CARE, or (800) 363-2273.

An additional concern for active-duty family members, especially those in remote locations, is how to register a newborn child in DEERS.

A little-known fact is the sponsor-signed DEERS enrollment form, DD Form 1172, together with a certificate of a live birth signed by the attending physician, can be mailed to the nearest military personnel office.

Initially, sponsors do not need to have a social security number or birth certificate to register a child into DEERS or for initial enrollment into TRICARE Prime. These can be submitted at a later date once the sponsor receives the official documents.

To limit out-of-pocket costs and problems with claims processing, a newborn should be enrolled in TRICARE Prime not more than 120 days after birth.

It is very important that active-duty people and their spouses understand their TRICARE options and have an easily accessible point of contact to obtain additional TRICARE information if needed.

Naval Hospital Jacksonville has knowledgeable Health Benefit Advisors at the hospital and branch medical clinics to assist people with their TRICARE benefits.

The Jacksonville TRICARE Service Center is also available for questions. Call 1-(800) 444-5445.

Flu shots available soon for all eligible members

Naval Hospital Jacksonville expects the flu vaccine by early November. For vaccine arrival updates, call 542-HOSP (4677) and press 1.

Active duty members should see their command preventative medicine representative for flu shot schedules. Once the vaccine arrives, shots will be given to retirees and family members, Monday to Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m., on a walk-in basis. TRICARE Prime patients enrolled to Naval Hospital Jacksonville will receive flu shots from their Primary Care Manager. All others can receive them in the Family Practice Clinic.

Taking the fire prevention message to the street

NAS Jax Fire department kicked off Fire Prevention Week 2001 on Oct. 7 and it runs through Oct. 13.

Fire Prevention Week is held each year in October on the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire of 1871. The first Fire Prevention week was declared in 1925 by President Calvin Coolidge on the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire.

During Fire Prevention Week, the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) sponsors programs in schools and communities all over America to teach the public about fire safety. "We firefighters want to emphasize the importance of fire prevention and safety," said Billie Bryant a fire inspector here at NAS Jax. Bryant was participating in a Fire Prevention Week demonstration at the NAS Jax Navy Exchange on Tuesday. Earlier, the department had taken their message to Yellow Water Housing residents and on Oct. 10 they visited the Children's Ward at the Naval Hospital. Remaining events on the firefighter's schedules include a Sesame Street Fire Prevention Puppet Show at the Child Development Center and continuing unannounced fire evacuation drills through today.

Bryant said, "probably the most important things we do as firefighters is fire prevention training. We would much rather prevent fires all together rather than have to put them out.

"This years Fire Prevention Week seems to be more important, because of the Sept. 11 tragedy," said Bryant.

For more information about Fire Prevention Week call 542-2783.

Ruling permits conversion between FEHB and TRICARE

The Office of Personnel Management has issued an interim rule to allow TRICARE-eligible FEHB Program annuitants and former spouses to suspend their FEHB enrollments, and then return to the FEHB Program during the Open Season, or return to FEHB coverage immediately if they involuntarily lose TRICARE coverage.

The intent of this rule is to allow TRICARE-eligible beneficiaries to avoid the expense of continuing to pay FEHB Program premiums while they are using TRICARE coverage, without endangering their ability to return to the FEHB Program in the future.

Effective Oct. 1, 2001, the National Defense Authorization Act for 2001 will reinstate TRICARE coverage for Medicare-eligible uniformed services retirees, their survivors and eligible dependents. TRICARE coverage will be advantageous to many Medicare-eligible military system beneficiaries who now are covered under the FEHB Program as Federal civilian retirees, family members, or former spouses.

Under previous FEHB regulations, an annuitant or former spouse who canceled his or her FEHB coverage to use TRICARE coverage would not be allowed to return to FEHB coverage. Therefore, OPM has issued these interim regulations, with a request for comments, to allow these FEHB participants to suspend, rather than cancel, their FEHB coverage when they begin TRICARE coverage. Under this rule, they are allowed to return to FEHB coverage immediately if they involuntarily lose TRICARE coverage or, if not, during the next annual FEHB Open Season.

We also amended our regulations to clarify a similar situation involving FEHB-covered annuitants and former spouses. The regulations allow an individual who drops FEHB coverage when he or she enrolls in a Medicare-sponsored plan, or in Medicaid or a similar State-sponsored program of medical assistance for the needy, to return to FEHB coverage during the annual Open Season or immediately upon being involuntarily disenrolled from the non-FEHB coverage.

If you have FEHB related questions, please send them to fehb@opm.gov or the above mentioned interim rule is available online in text and PDF format at the following web addresses:
